

Yes my dear,
we can talk to the dead...

Just the other day I accompanied my father to the funeral of his long time friend. I have been attending Mass since my birth, and as a card carrying member of the baby boomer generation, I have certainly attended many funeral Masses.

The homily during this particular Mass moved me unlike ever before, as the priest spoke of immortality. My mind began to drift as I thought about that word and the close relationship it has to my ability to connect with spirits on the other side. Immortality, not mortal, not liable or subject to death; undying, everlasting.

As we were being comforted by his words, I felt like the pieces of a puzzle were snapping together! I then remembered back a few years to an announcement the Pope had made, relative to communicating with the dead.

This is an excerpt from the press release;

Dialogue with the dead is feasible, Vatican spokesman says.

ROME – One of the most authoritative spokesmen of the Roman Catholic Church has raised eyebrows among the faithful by declaring that the Church believes in the feasibility of communication with the dead.

The Rev. Gino Concetti, chief theological commentator for the Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, denied he was signaling any change in approach. But he agreed that his remarks might come as a jolt to many believers.

He said the Church remained opposed to the raising of spirits, but added: "Communication is possible between those who live on this earth and those who live in a state of eternal repose, in heaven or purgatory. It may even be that God lets our loved ones send us messages to guide us at certain moments in our life."

Knowing the love and lightness I feel when connecting with the dead, there is no doubt in my mind that God's hand is involved.
